POEMS EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW.

THE APRIL BOY.

As I went through the April-world To watch my viole ts blow, I met a child I long had loved Whose heart was clean as snow.

"Come hither, little White-of Soul, Now tell me how you fare!" He ran to me, he sprang at me, The sun was in his hair.

His eyes were laughing like his lips, He had an April look, His feet were wet as ocean shells From wading in the brook.

And Nature, too, became a child: As far as eye could see The earth was one big romping-ground For Earth, the Boy, and Me!

I quite forgot my violets, His eyes were both so blue, His merry lips that pressed my own Were mayflowers moist with dew;

And as we took the road to town, The little lad and I, He seemed to hold the whole of Spring And brush the Winter by.

The birds all knew him, that I'm sure, They ne'er sang thus for me; The budding branches seemed to reach To kiss each dimpled knee.

And when I left him near his home, "Good-bye, big man," he said; "Good-bye, Sir April," I returned-He shouted, laughed and fled.

-Selected.

SUCCESS,

The word unbreathed, whose temper true From the heart's fire was sent. The goal I never reached, whereto My spirit's strength was bent, All-all I longed and failed to do Is full accomplishment.

And somewhere in the fields whereon The ungarnered harvests be, My sheaves lie ripening in the sun That warms eternity. And filled with food myself bath sown This famished soul shall be. -Grace Ellery Channing.

NOTES.

Arrangements have been concluded by Klaw & Erlanger for the presentation, during the coming autumn, of a play founded upon Sir Gilbert Parkers great novel, The Right of Way. The story has been dramatized by Eugene Prebrey, and he and Sir Gilbert Parkhave signed a contract with the theatrical firm. Has it ever been noticed what a great proportion of present-day novelists are Canadian by birth?

Most notable, of course, is Sir Gilbert Parker, whose novel, The Weavers, is now appearing serially, and who won such fame with The Right of Way and

Then there is Basil King who imitated Gilbert Parker not only by being born in Canada, but by marrying an American wife. He is about to publish a new novel entitled The Giant's

Elinor Kyn, too— whose most recent novel is Beyond the Rocks, and who is also well known for her Vicissitudes of Evangeline and Reflections of Ambro-sine—is Canadian by birth, her father being the late Douglas Sutherland, or

Norman Duncan, also, whose new novel will shortly be published by the Harpers, is a Canadian, having been born at Brantford in 1871.

born at Brantford in 1871.

Other prominent names might be added; and it is a point of great additional interest that the Canadian literary workers do not all go to England or all to the United States, but that while some, like Elinor Glyn and Sir Gilbert Parker, are fascinated by London, others, like Norman Duncan and Basil King, are more strongly attracted by what, outside of our own borders, is often denominated "the States."

Novelists find a perennial supply of admirable titles for their books in Shakespeare: If a complete list were to be compiled it would show hundreds of distinguished books which have their names from that inspired source.

Latest of all is that important book, by Basil Kink, published this month by the Harpers and entitled The Giant's Strength—it being a story of the richest of all Americans, a wonderful personality, and of the rivalry for his daughter's love between a likable Eng-

Seems as though the more toasted marshmellows we buy the quicker they sell. And why not? More candy lovers getting acquainted with a dandy product.

The Large Round Boxes 10 Cents.

Also the chocolate coated marshmellows.

"SCHRAMMS"

Great Prescription Drug Ind. 'Phone

lishman and a young American. The title is from Measure for Measure:

"O, it is excellent To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous To use it like a giant."

There is a most entertaining story in regard to how it came about that Henry James began to practise dictation in his writing.

It was not so very long ago that he adopted dictation; but he took to it with ease and readiness, and, as he has his copy typewritten out with wide spaces between the lines, and then with pen in hand, goes over every word and phrase with the most exacting care, he finds that dictation has made his work easier without in the least doing injury to his style.

And here is the explanation of how the change came:

the change came:

When he was in the United States, recently, preparing his book, The American Scene, he met his old friend William Dean Howells.

To Mr. Howells he told that he had changed his method of composition. "I have begun to use dictation," he said. Mr. Howells was interested, but not interested in precisely the way that Mr. James expected. James expected.

"You know why I did it, don't you?" said Mr. James.
"Why, no." replied Mr. Howells. "I don't believe I do."

"I did it just because I learned that you yourself had taken up dictation," said Mr. James.

Mr. Howells looked at him in quizzleak astonishment. He smiled. Mr. James began to understand, and he too, smiled. too, smiled.

"1? But I never use and never have used dictation!" said Mr. Howells.

And Mr. James was greatly amused to think that he had made such an important change through this influence portant change through this innue of a false report regarding his old

William Dean Howells, who has just passed his seventieth birthday—he was born on March 1. 1837, at Martin's Ferry, Ohlo—feels deeply touched by the great number of congratulatory letters full of kindness and good wishes, which he has received in regard to his passing of this important milepost.

He was quite ill for some days recently, so that, to his deep regret, he was unable even to be at the Longfellow Centenary dinner at Boston, on Feb. 27.

He has quite recovered now, however and among other tasks is facing the pleasant but lengthy one of answering those who have so cordially written to him in regard to his birthday. His only fear is that some will think that he has slighted them, or is indifferent to their kind wishes, whereas, on the contrary, he deeply prizes these evidences of could will. of good will.

Increased attention has been attracted to Rex Beach by the dramatization of The Spoilers, and its appearance in the cities of the cast. It is now heing presented in New York.

It is seldom that success comes so rapidly to any man as it came to Rex Beach.

The acceptance of his novel as a second

LEAVES FROM OLD ALBUMS

ABRAM HATCH.

As He Looked in 1866 When He Was Arrested in Ireland on Suspicion of Being "Head Center" Stevens, the Fe nian Agitator.

The above picture of Hon. Abram Hatch, for many years president of the Wasatch stake, was taken in 1865, when he was performing a mission to the British Isles. Before coming home Mr. Hatch, with Messrs, W. W. Riter and Heber John Richards, visited Ireland, and upon landing at Dublin he was placed under arrest, being mistaken for the Irish agitator "Head Center" Stevens. The Fenian excitement was at its height, and after Mr. Hatch had convinced his captors that it was a case of mistaken identity, he and his companions narrowly escaped violence from an angry mob on the way from the jail to their hotel, whither they were accompanied by a large force of police. Two days in Ireland, under such conditions, were sufficient for the tourists. The photo from which the reproduction is made is in a collection belonging to Mr. Riter.

of the Blood, is, like every other au-thor who wins really world-wide suc-cess, in receipt of great numbers of letters from all sorts of people. To a cer-tain extent such letter-writing is pleasant, for it indicates a highly de-sirable popularity. But facing the alternative of answering the huge num-ber of volunteer correspondents or else of appearing to be discourteous has ele-ments which Mr. Hichends finds, naturally enough, to be not altogether a thing of joy. Mr. Hichens, too, not only receives art. Hickens, too, not only receives letters from admirers and from literary aspirants, many of them asking for advice or help, but, as he actively studied music before entering upon literary work, he actually receives numerous letters from poets who, enclosing their verses, ask him to write music for them! sic for them!

In addition to the editions already is-Sued, American, English, Canadian and Australian, of Will Harben's recent great success, Ann Boyd, the Harpers are just issuing another edition for Australian Renewed interest has naturally been aroused, too, in his earlier works, and a new edition of his Westerfelt is being issued.

BOOKS.

A novel published by the Bobbs Merrill company is "The Brass Bowl" by Louis Joseph Vance and is one of the best stories ever published by that firm in its special line of romance. It is a tale of mystery from beginning to end and not a line in it that does not bristle with interest of the breathless sort that keeps one up past midnight to see the development and finish of its entrapeling situations. It is bright fight to see the development and finish of its entrancing situations. It is bright from beginning to end, and one closes the book with a feeling of personal loss in the close of the story so skillfully and realistically pictured. It ranks with the best volumes published by that firm, whose name on the cover insures that nothing tame has commonsures. that arm, whose name on the cover insures that nothing tame nor common-place is within. It is, if anything, more delightful than "The House of a Thousand Candies" and "The Port of Missing Men," two ro-mantic novels which have made the fame of their author. The novel is on sale at the Descret News book store.

It was certain that when such a book as "The White Caj" was written, that the firm which has put into print the the firm which has put into print the most fascinating American romances of the day should be the publishers. In Gelett Burgess' fascinating story by that name the Bobbs-Merrill company produced one of the eleverest occult romances recently essayed. The author has previously proved his talent for fanciful fiction in "The Reign of Queen Isyl" and "Vivette" with numerous minor productions, but in this last romance Mr. Burgess has gone a long way beyond his other work. The story is delightfully conceived and carried out with a realistic touch that tones down the unusual theme and incidents in a matter of fact way that keeps the story strictly in the realm of the probable. Indeed, such cases as the dual nature of the heroine are not unknown to metaphysical science. The depiction of the two natures are exquisitely shaded, and half the author's credit is in this delicate portraiture of one personality including characters of widely dissimilar traits.

Novel in idea, incident and treatment Mr. Burgess story will prove a treat to many minds jaded with sameness of fictitional motive or otherwise, and we look to see the volume reprinted over and over again. On sale at the Deseret News book store News book store.

A dainty volume and one which will receive more than passing interest locally is "Indian Love Letters," by Marah Ellis Ryan designed and iliustrated by Raiph Fletcher Seymour, copies of whose Indian pictures have been recently on exhibition at a local store. A Hopi Indian lad returns to the land of his fathers from a college in the east, whither he has been sent by the "Agency" to be educated into the ways and beliefs of the white man. He had learned the civilized man's life, but all the time in his heart he kept to the ancient faith. He has one sentiment too deeply rooted in his primitive consciousness to be easily subdued—that the white man's God and his mode of worship are not for the Indian, and that the latter's simple appeal to the the sun, the moon, the rain, the twilight is enough. The letters are very touching, and give a new and more personal meaning to the red man's spiritual preferences. Mes Para will have touching, and give a new and more personal meaning to the red man's spiritual preferences. Mrs. Ryan will have a large audience for this very curious and moving little book, for the letters are delightful from many standpoints, as showing the Indian heart touched by the influences of cilivilization, yet sensing the difference of nature, instinct and circumstance which separate him from the other race, one of whose women has won his love. The very atmosphere and soul of the desert race is in the lines of the book, and the author has won laurels that will long be unfading in her true conception and picturing of her chosen theme "Spots" is the magnetic title to a practical little volume of 202 cleansers compilled by Clarice T. Courvoisier. Its general appearance, as to binding and typography, is so alluring as to suggest the gift book, yet it is eminently a book for use. As such it opens up immaculate vistas to the individual who (in the past) has struggled with the spot that would not out. And who has not? It is most conveniently arranged in classified groups and is provided with an adequate index for hasty reference.

resourceful in emergency, quick to advise, and ever ready with brillant susestion for the lightning of the housekeeper's continuous battle. With "Spots" in the house, stains of all kinds—grass, ink, blood, iodine, or wine—will evaporate into thin air; the silverware will look brighter, the flatirons smoother, the copper kettles will begin to shine, the glassware to glis-ten, and even the old plaster casts will assume a fresher and more cheerful countenance

"Spots" makes its appearance in ob-long format, brightly rubricated and bound in flexible watered buckram, Price, 75 cents not.—Paul Elder & Company, San Francisco and New York.

Alas, Poor America!

We are a Sorry Lot.

Our London Literary Letter.

Special Correspondence.

ONDON, March 28,-Most English reviewers apparently passed over in silence a book recently published here, and perhaps its interest to American readers would have been overlooked altogether if it had not been overlooked altogether if it had not been for a paragraph in this week's Academy giving the novelist called "Rita" a candid expression of its opinion of her for what she had written about Americans. It seemed best to get a copy of the book called "Personal Opinions Publicly Expressed" and see what the lady had been saying. The result was entertaining. Here are some extracts from a chapter entitled "The Amazing American:" I have never been fortunate enough nazing American:
'I have never been fortunate enough meet an American gentleman or an merican lady.

I venture to Beach.

The acceptance of his novel as a serial, its acceptance for publication in book form, and the acceptaince of the proposition to have it dramatized, all came to him within barely more than a week, and when all this was done the novel was not much more than half written. But, of course, it was one of those rare novels which infallibly indicate success even before they are complete.

Naturally, too, before its final acceptance, the author was asked to outline the part of his story still unwritten he had not planned it in advance, but on the spur of the moment swiftly outlined a conclusion. That swift inspiration was, as it turned out, just what he needed, for he found that the story naturally completed itself along the very line that thus came to him.

Roberts Hichens, author of The Call

he will swallow for a lifetime, but an adverse opinion riles bim beyond foradverse opinion riles him beyond for-giveness. America has no in-ner life and no rest; no art, and little literature worth the name. It tramples rough-shod on all the finer flowers of civilization, and cultivates rough-and-ready weeds in their place. It considers substitutes as far 'cuter' than any gen-uine produce. To business an American brings little or no honorable feeling. He is impatient of steady and honest methods. He would sooner make one dollar by a trick than earn a hundred by fair dealing. by fair dealing.

"Looked at dispassionately, the am-"Looked at dispassionately, the amazing American is more an object for contempt than admiration; of wonder than of example. The American is the quintessence of all that is loud, lavish, and extravagant. To him life is a vast, yeasty, frothy tumuit, for ever throwing up new combinations of success, and new schemes for wealth and aggrandisement.

and aggrandisement.

"There is no beauty so short-lived as that of the American girl. No physique at once so fascinating and so feeble. The bringing-up of the American child is altogether faulty and irrational, and in no way tends to render it robust or healthy. Its youth is as exotic as brief, for at 30 or even sooner the American man or woman is a prey to dyspopsia and insomnia, and divers other lils"—and so on ad trainitum ad nauseau.

The academy calls this "a violent and unmannerly attack upon Americans, delivered without inspiration and without wit," and expresses the view that Americans are not likely to take "Rila" as an authorized exponent of English opinion, and that everyone in England who knows American men and women will promptly condemn such writing as this.

"Elta" is a Mrs. Humphreys. She has written a good many novels, and the trouble seems to be that she could not get them published in America, al-though they were offered far and wide. LAND!!

Over the recent illness of Sir Arthur Conan Dovie much secrecy was maintained, but it is understood that at one scare the life of the famous author of "Sherlock Holmes" was almost despaired of. Since then, however, the welcome news has come that he is well on the road to recovery and this is now confirmed by the announcement that he will preside at a literary dinner to be given in London on April 22. The gathering will celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Henry Fleiding, the author of "Tom Jones," and will be given by the Society of Somerset men in London of which "Doctor" Doyle is one of the most prominent and enthusiastic members.

Literary aspirants were never so

Literary aspirants were never so numerous as at present. For every young man who dreams of some day becoming a millionaire there are probably 10—to say nothing of the other sex—who indulge in visions of fame to be gained by authorship. So large is their number that authors have discovered a good sale awaits any book which purports to tell them how they may realize some measure, at least of their ambition. Arnold Bennett who wrote "Anna of the Five Towns," published for their benefit "How To Be An Author," with results that were at all events eminently satisfactory so far as concerns his cwn pocket. And now Barry Pain, one of the most successful of English humorous story writers, is about to reap a harvest in the same profitable field by publishing a little book of story-writing for beginners—a class which in the British isles alone probably foots up a round million. No doubt they may obtain some valuable which in the British isles alone probably foots up a round million. No doubt they may obtain some valuable hints from Barry Pain's work. His own inexhaustible fertility in inventing plots will lend a peculiar interest to his chapter "How to Think of It." But to think of it and to do it are two very different things. It is that which makes Barry Pain well aware that however hard he may have striven to give away his secrets no serious increase in the number of his own rivals will result therefrom.

CHARLES OGDENS.

Values.

The High Grade

"Anderson" Piano

$650 Value for $440

$350 Piano Value for $198

We invite you to Examine our used and traded-

in Pianos at Very LOW PRICES.

Your Upright Piano and

$275 for a High-grade

Player Piano, on Easy

Payments.

40,000 Acres Utah Range Land.

Union Pacific Railroad Company Offer at very low prices and easy 10 year terms to close out. Will sell in large and small tracts—your last chance to secure good range in Utah. Particulars of LAND!!

UNION PACIFIC R.R. LAND AGENCY 15 W. 2nd So. St., Salt Lake City

SCENIC LINE OF THE WORLD.

Panorama of Natural Beauty all the Way.

A Beauty Spot in Every Mile.

Canyon of the Grande Eagle River Canyon Wagon Wheel Gap Glenwood Springs

Canyon of the Gunnison Garden of the Gods. Manitou Springs The Royal Gorge

Through Pullman and Tourist Sleepers

To Denver, St. Louis and Chicago without Change. Open Top Observation Cars Through the Royal Gorge and Grand Cangon.

For Folders, Booklets, etc. address I. A. BENTON, G. A. P. D. Salt Lake City, Utah.

The Home Industry Exhibit and Advertising Sale is Still On!

To accommodate our visiting friends and the city folks who have not been able to attend our exhibit the

CASH PREMIUM SALE IS EXTENDED TO INCLUDE MONDAY.

WE HAND YOU 25c WITH EACH AND EVERY $1.00 PURCHASE.

The sale includes Hosiery, Underwear, Sweaters, Shawls, Skirts. Vests-in fact everything in Knit Goods

You get the bisgest dollar's worth you ever got and 25c cash for $1.00.

Worth while, isn't it?

Visitors are invited to go to our factory and see the machinery in operation—knittling the best Hosiery made—that's the "MOUNTAIN LION HOLE PROOF HOSIERY

ENSIGN KNITTING COMPANY,

30-32 RICHARDS STREET.

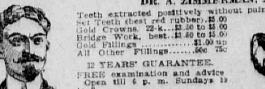

Makers of "Quality" Knit Gords.

N.Y. & Western Piano Co.,

46 MARKET STREET.

Below Walker Bros. Near P. O.

Salt Lake City UTAH DENTAL CO. AND PARK CITY. DR. A. ZIMMERMAN, MGR.

BRING THIS AD. WITH YOU-

LAST CALL

FOR SERVICE APPLICATIONS.

It is nearing the time when we shall be ready to install Ranges and Meters. If you are planning to equip your kitchen for-

We would suggest that you make application for service pipes AT ONCE before our rush of setting appliances comes. We don 't want to have you waiting for connections after

Gas is turned on. Have the pipes run now and be ready in time. Drop in at our office and see the new Gas Ranges, or ask to have our Representa-

Watch for our Great Sale of Gas Ranges

UTAH GAS & COKE CO.

OFFICE: 61-65 Main Street. Phones, 432.